The Syrian Coalition condemned the heinous crime carried out by the ISIS extremist group in the city of Hasaka on Monday evening when an ISIS suicide bomber detonated his explosive belt at a wedding party in the city. The attack left dozens of civilians killed and injured.

In a statement released on Tuesday, the Coalition reaffirmed the Free Syrian Army's firm determination to eradicate terrorism and defeat those who nurture and use terrorism to discredit the Syrian revolution and spread chaos in Syria.

The Coalition denounced all crimes, "whether perpetrated through the use of conventional weapons, barrel bombs, or explosive belts." The Coalition vowed that "all those responsible for these crimes will one day be held to account for the crimes they have committed against the Syrian people." (Source: Syrian Coalition)
